BRIEF COMMENTARY

By looking at our statistics charts, we can clearly see that the traditional worldview is dominant with percentage of 36,50% followed by integrative word worldview at 17,30%. This indicate that most of the participants are traditionalists.

TRADITIONAL WORLDVIEW

In traditional world view, the universe is all God's creation. They seek the truth, knowledge and wisdom from scriptures (bible verses usually) and convention. According to worldview journey this worldview is characterized by theistic, dualistic, and transcendent view of reality. Traditionalists still hold traditional values such as unity, religious faith, respect for authority, and community services. The notable strength of this worldview lies in its unwavering dedication to the collective, its emphasis on discipline and its promotion on social values.

INTERGRATIVE WORLDVIEW

Integrative worldview, view the universe as a spiritually and ever-changing place. They seek the truth and understanding by various methods and beliefs, such as science as spirituality. Personal growth is a priority for them and they believe that cultural progress can help solve global problems. Their core principles includes self-actualization, and the pursuit of truth and wisdom. The notable strength of this worldview lies in its unwavering commitment to integrate conflict and divided opinions.

MODERN WORLDVIEW

According to worldview journey, the modern worldview is characterized as objectified, materialist, and/or mechanistic view of reality. Modernist hold individualistic values such as being self-reliant and independent, hedonism and high achievement, being powerful and having a status. They see nature as something to used for human purpose or to their advantage. Their primary strength lies in its unwavering dedication to individual autonomy, dignity and achievement.

POSTMODERN WORLDVIEW

Postmodern worldview is characterized by relativity, pluralism, and fragmentation. In their pursuit of the truth, postmodernism rely on subjective and qualitative methods of understanding. They tend to ignore God, he has nothing to say about how they should behave or belief. Their motto or what they believe in is mostly in the saying, " It is true, if you really believe it." Their values are authenticity, imagination, openness, and the freedom of being expressive. Postmodern worldview's strength is their profound level of empathy to the suffering of others and their dedication to achieve social justice.
